Excerpt: ... God conveys a living power to the souls of men, and in which he still speaks to us. So saith Stephen: Moses "received the living oracles to give unto us;" not, to our fathers only, who lived in those days, but to us also, now so many generations after. They are the oracles of that God who is the first truth, whose being is truth, and who therefore cannot lie. §12. Obs. b. God hath in infinite love and wisdom so disposed of his word, as that there are first principles plain and necessary, laid down in it, to facilitate our instruction. Men have found it necessary in teaching all arts and sciences, first to lay down general principles, which they make the basis of all their following deductions. Thus being what the present exigence of our nature requires, accordingly there are "first principles of the oracles of God." And this is necessarily required to the nature of first principles; they must be maxims, plainly declared, or else they are very unmeet to be the first principles of knowledge in any kind. The minds of men being duly in-laid with these first principles, it is inconceivable how they may thrive in the knowledge of the deepest mysteries. But he that lays the foundation of an house, and neglects carrying on the building, will find but a sorry shelter in a storm. Again, first principles are such as, without which, and if the mind be not duly possessed with them, all endeavors after higher attainments are preposterous, and will undoubtedly prove fruitless. Those who aim at abstract speculations without these principles, are either always learning, and never come to the knowledge of the truth, wearying themselves in search of what they cannot comprehend; or else, are vainly puffed up in their fleshy minds, upon a presumption that they know some marvellous ...
