Knowing that he allowed his need to control things to drive her away, the only thing he can pray for now is that she will reconsider their divorce. She hasn't backed down since before he lost his sister Vanessa, and with the new complication he's brought to their story he is quickly losing faith that she will give him another chance.

After being away from him for almost two years, her heart is ready to give in so she can return to the only home she knows. When she breaks down and returns, she not only is forced to face the reality of what tore them apart in the first place, but his new mistakes as well.

Is their love strong enough to survive all of the tests that have been brought into their lives, or will they finally file for divorce?

Can Isiah get his wife to forgive him for losing his faith in them when life spent beyond his control?

Can Farrah forgive him for shutting her out and bringing more problems to their already volatile marriage?
